COLUMBIA, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 18, 1919.

Back from Mississippi.

Messrs. Allen Walker and Cassius Breeding returned from West Point, Miss., last Tuesday afternoon. They did not buy land on this trip, but they have a proposition out for a large boundary, and may yet close the deal. Mr. Walker reports that it rained in this immediate section for nineteen days, and that Mr. C. S. Harris and Mr. R. K. Young lost some alfalfa, but they are not the least discouraged, and are satisfied that they are located in the right country for money making. The lands in this locality, he says are very valuable and very productive, and that buyers from various States arrive daily, the hotels being crowded. This is the third trip for Mr. Walker and he is going again as soon as he closes some deals here. "I am determined to go where there is big business," said he. Mr. Walker has been a successful trader from his youth up, and is better satisfied when he is buying and selling farms. He is also an experienced cultivator.

Business Looking up.

Mr. John Q. Alexander, who travels for the Carter Dry Goods Company, Louisville, was in Columbia Wednesday. In talking with him he said: "Business is booming. I have been on the road for many years, and this season I am selling more goods than in any year of the past. Crops are good and the merchants throughout the country are stimulated and are not afraid to buy goods."

Sergt. Chas. M. Tarter.

In the list of Kentucky soldiers, honored for bravery in France, we find this notice of an Adair county boy who distinguished himself:

"Near Vaux, France, on July 1, 1918, when his Captain was wounded Chas. M. Tarter, of Tarter, went out under violent machine-gun fire to bring the officer to shelter and was severely wounded himself while performing this heroic act."

See my line of men's and boy's caps, price the best.

Three Generations.

Last Thursday night there were three generations stopping at the Jeffries Hotel, the oldest being only thirty-three years old. They were Mrs. Esther Page 33, and her daughter, Mrs. Rebecca York and the latter's son, Johnny York. They registered from Lexington, Ill., and were in this section, to visit relatives.

Lost.

Thursday evening, June 12, from Milltown to Ed Hancock's saw mill, pocket book. $17.00 in bills, $8.00 in checks. $5.00 reward.

G. A. Beard.

Next Sunday, the 22nd, has been designated throughout Kentucky as "Salvation Army Day." Wherever services are held on this day the must be the subject of the minister. Dwell upon the work of this band of Christian workers, their services in the war and in civil life. Money must be raised to carry on the good work.

WANTED.—A girl to help do light housekeeping with some knowledge of cooking. Three in family.

Mrs. J. G. Eubank,
Columbia, Ky.

A sufficient amount of money has been raised by J. O. Russell to build the wall at the cemetery to the drive way. But he is still taking subscriptions to complete it all the way.

Mr. Walter Sullivan has sold his barbering outfit to Mr. Calvin Maupin, and Mr. Mont Maupin is now in charge. Mr. Sullivan has not given out the business he will engage in.

Interesting Suit Filed.

Last Wednesday Garnett & Van Winkle, Louisville attorneys, filed in the Adair circuit clerk's office a suit for $2,000 in favor of L. B. Pendleton, of Knifley, Adair, Adair county, against the Western Union Telegraph Company, making Jasper Doss, Lee Chelf and the Campbellville Telephone Company parties to the suit.

The circumstances which brought about the suit, are as follows:

L. B. Pendleton, the plaintiff, states that in October, 1918, he was at work for the government at Stithton, Hardin county, his wife and children being at Knifley, in Adair county; that his son, Fred, about twenty years old, became a victim of the flu; that on the 27th of October, J. H. Pendleton, father of L. B. Pendleton, started a message to the latter from Knifley, which stated "Fred had sick. Answer." That message was not delivered and the boy died on the 28th which was Sunday and on the same day he was buried. It was the following Thursday before Mr. Pendleton was advised of his son's death. Therefore he claims damages in the sum of two thousand dollars.

Fare to Louisville.

Teachers attending the Kentucky Educational Association in Louisville, beginning June 23, will be granted one and one-third fare for the round trip, providing they follow these conditions:

When they leave home they must buy a ticket to Louisville and pay full fare. They must take a receipt for this ticket. After they get to Louisville presentation of this receipt to Prof. Williams and endorsement by him, will enable them to secure a ticket back home for one-third fare.

The railroad administration has wired positively that this is the only way teachers can secure the reduced fare to and from the Louisville convention.

Any member of the Kentucky Educational Association is entitled to secure this reduced fare in this way, whether he is a teacher or not.

Prof. J. A. Jones, of Glen ville, this county, has accepted the Superintendency of the Livingston Graded and High school for the coming school year. Prof. Jones is a gentleman of correct habits and is a teacher of experience, and there is no doubt but he will fill the position with credit to himself and to the entire satisfaction of the Board of control. His work will begin the first of September. Livingston is located in Rockcastle, a county properly named, as there are fourteen tunnels in the county, all built through rock.

The ministers who are conducting the tent meeting arrived the first of last week and the first service was last Wednesday night, and large audiences attended throughout the past week. They are regular ordained ministers of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, and they have been successful at other points in winning souls to Christ. Every body is invited to attend the services.

We have talked to a number of farmers in recent days about the wheat prospects. They were unanimous in stating that the yield this year will be much greater than last season. It is said some crops will be harvested the last of this week.

The series of meetings that are being conducted at the tent, commence promptly on time. The evening meetings open at 8:30 and the people of Columbia are requested to be on time. Good preaching and the singing is inspiring.

Lighting struck the dwelling of Mr. George Franklin Saturday night of last week. Mrs. Franklin was so severely shocked that it took heroic efforts to save her.

Mrs. S. G. Shelley, District Secy.

The Third District Convention of the Christian church will convene with the Church at Roley, this county, beginning on Friday evening, June 27, continuing to Sunday June 29. The District is composed of the following seven counties: Adair, Casey, Clinton, Cumberland, Metcalfe, Monroe and Russell. A good program is prepared and we hope to have a great Convention. Blanks will be sent to all the churches to make their reports on, and when they are correctly filled out mail them at once to Walter McKinney, Jamestown, Ky. The Roley people will take care of the convention in good style. If the churches can not get their reports filled out in time to send them to our Secretary, bring or send them to Roley in care of the President, H. B. Gwinn.

Some farmers were late in getting their wheat cut and it was greatly damaged, by falling. On the farm, sold by C. S. Harris, the wheat was in a very damaged condition Sunday. Also several crops above this farm. A few farmers saved their crops by having it cut Sunday.

C. N. Mikel, of Campbellsville, has been at work for the past ten days on Miss Jennie Garnett's driveway. It will be a fine piece of work when completed and will add much to the value and also the appearance of the property.

Eld. H. B. Gwinn, of Jamestown, was in Columbia last Friday. He reported that he closed a splendid meeting in his town last Sunday night week, with several additions to the congregation.

Mr. H. A. Walker of this place, has been appointed by the Governor Magistrate of the Columbia Magisterial district, embracing all three of the voting precincts. He qualified last Friday.

Corn in Adair county got a good start though, some of it was planted late, and it is now growing nicely.

Watch and read the chautauqua ads which will appear in our paper next week.

Distressing Accident.

Last Friday forenoon, about 9:30 o'clock a distressing accident occurred at Sandusky & Young's spoke and heading machine, in the mill district.

Henry Sandusky, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Sandusky, about fourteen years old, was employed feeding staves into the Surfacer. He reached with the can to oil the machine, his left hand spread out on the board that received the staves, passing them into the machine. While in this position his left hand was caught by the Surfacer and was cut off just above the wrist. That is, it was crushed to the wrist and had to be amputated, Drs. C. M. Russell and O. P. Miller being the surgeons. After the limb was dressed the patient became easy.

The unfortunate lad is a bright boy, full of energy, and the whole town is in sympathy with him, and his parents, who weep as only a father and mother can for an obedient and loving offspring. No blame is attached to any of the other employees for this unfortunate occurrence.

It is fortunate that it was not his index hand. Many a man has gone through the world with one hand, making good in the business he undertook.

The revival meeting at Jamestown, conducted by H. B. Gwinn and Mr. Cassidy, of Morehead, Ky., closed on Sunday night, the 8th inst. It was a great meeting in many respects. The attendance was the largest the church ever had, and the interest was good from the beginning. There were 5 additions all told. But many hearts were touched by the songs and sermons that will yet respond to the gospel call. Mr. Cassidy is a fine chorus leader and his solos were much enjoyed by the people. He made friends of all the people. H. B. Gwinn is doing a fine work in Russell county, and is loved by the people generally. He will begin a meeting at Russell Springs the second Sunday in July. Rev. Z. T. Williams will assist him part of the time.

Married at Lebanon.

Miss Rosa Kemp, daughter of Mrs. Malissa Kemp, and a niece of Mr. G. A. Kemp, this place, was married at the home of her brother, Mr. Oscar Kemp, in Lebanon, last Wednesday, to Mr. Wm. H. Black. The couple reside at Bradfordsville. The bride is a young woman of charming personality, the groom a young business man. The couple left to spend a few days in Indianapolis, before returning to their home.

By request Bro. W. A. Garnett, of Glensfork Lodge, F. and A. M., conferred the Master's degree on Bro. Shreve Davis, in Columbia Lodge, No. 96, last Friday night. The Master and members of the latter lodge return thanks to Bro. Garnett for the very efficient manner in which he conferred the degree. Bros. J. W. Jones, also of Glensfork lodge and Bro. Robt. Bailey, of Hood Lodge, and Bro. L. Akin, of Sparksville lodge, were present and did very acceptable work.

Companion T. G. Smith, of Danville, will be here next Friday and in the evening he will inspect Columbia Chapter, No. 7. All Royal Arch Masons are urged to attend.

Rural schools will not open before the middle of July or the first of August. Can't get school books, so says the State Superintendent.

Ralph, a six year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Bennett, Fairplay, died and was buried last Wednesday afternoon. He was a bright little boy.

Get ready for circuit court which will convene here the first Monday in July.

I have just received another car load of oats.

The Boys And The Fourth.

Everybody, this way for the promised picnic dinner at the Fair Grounds July 4th for the soldiers and the sailors of Adair Co.

They may not all be at home, then, but some have gone away already. They come and go, never can get them all together.

But let this be in honor of all. Bring your baskets of dinner and spread a long table on the green grass and everybody eat together.

The colored boys will have a similar dinner at a suitable place.

Capt. P. W. Bushong M. D. D. S. the most entertaining man in the state will exhibit his rare collection of curios from overseas about 11 o'clock. Then in the afternoon go to the Grounds where the colored people assemble. Capt. Bushong lives in Edmonton. Has served in France. He commands large crowds in Metcalfe Co. as he freely goes to speak to them of his observations on the battle fields. High school and home boys get up a ball game for afternoon. Who said Cane Valley Brass Band would not come? Everybody come. X X

The American Committee for Armenian and Syrian Relief, the only organization that is responsible for the relief of 3,950,000 Christians and Jews who were driven from their homes during the war, has undertaken to raise $30,000,000 for the relief of these suffering people. In order to do this they have called upon every county in the United States to raise a certain amount. The amount asked from Adair Co., is $850. Those wishing to contribute to this very worthy cause can send money or check to Miss Jennie Garnett, Treas., Columbia, Ky. All the money contributed reaches the field of need as the Committee transmit the money without expense.

Dr. Ed Sallee, who has been an invalid for several years, was in Columbia last Wednesday, the first time for nearly two years. He appears to be gaining his health, and his many friends would be glad to see him himself again. He is a man that we at all times admired for his independence. On every proposition he takes a position; and there has never been a misunderstanding as to how he stood on questions agitating the minds of the people.

Mr. Charles Finnell, who was a son-in-law of Mr. Wm. Hobson, his wife being Miss Grace Hobson, to whom he was married at Campbellsville, several years ago, was killed by being caught between cars at Lebanon Junction last week. He was buried Masonically at Campbellsville, where he had many friends. He was also well known about Jamestown where he and his wife spent some months.

In a few days many farmers of Adair county will be cutting wheat. The crop is reported good throughout the country.

Personels

Miss Sara Coffey made a recent visit to Catlettsburg.

Mrs. Ores Barger, who was quite sick several days of last week, is better.

Miss Julia Miller, who has been in school at Lexington, has returned home.

Mr. Henry N. Smythe and wife have returned to their home, in Kansas City, Mo.

Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Lloyd and Abe Dowell, of Janestown, were shopping in Columbia last Wednesday.

Mr. John Sandusky and wife, Mr. Jo Sandusky, wife and children, Bradfordsville, arrived last Friday.

Mr. Strother Hines, who holds a position in Louisville, is spending a few weeks with his mother and sisters.

Mr. J. R. Sanders, Deputy Collector headquarters at Louisville, made a business trip to Columbia last Friday.

Miss Frances E. Conover, who has been teaching science in the senior High school, Nicholasville, returned home last week.

Mrs. Bruce Montgomery came over in town last Friday. The first time she had been that far from home for several months.

Mr. G. B. Cheatham, of Milltown, went to Louisville last Thursday, where he met his son, Cassius, who recently landed at Camp Taylor, from overseas.

Mr. A. H. Rowe and his daughter, Mrs. P. V. Ballou, and her two daughters, Frances and Cytha, Rowena, were here last Saturday, and stopped at the home of Mr. W. T. McFarland.

Car Went Dead.

Miss Sara Coffey and her visitors, Misses Ruth and Martha Crawford, of Pikeville, and Miss Mary D. Patteson and Mr. Chelele Barger motored to Campbellsville last Sunday afternoon, taking supper in that city. They left for home about 10 o'clock. Reaching Cane Valley their car went dead and could not be moved. There was but one thing to do, walk to Columbia, so the journey was made, a distance of six miles, in high heel shoes, landing at their homes about 3 o'clock in the morning. They had a jolly time Monday relating their experiences, but their walkers were not feeling very comfortable, and the girls at this time are a little prejudiced against high heel shoes.

Notice of Election.

In compliance with a proclamation, issued by the Governor of Kentucky, on the 12th, day of May, 1919, Ordering that an Election for Representative in Congress for the Eighth Congressional District of Kentucky, composed of the Counties of Adair, Anderson, Boyle, Casey, Garrard, Jessamine, Lincoln, Madison, Mercer, Shelby and Spencer, be held in each voting precinct in the Counties aforesaid on Saturday August the 2nd., 1919.

An election will be held in Adair County on the above mentioned date in the various voting precincts of said County, for the purpose as above stated.

Cortez Sanders,

Sheriff of Adair County Ky.

30-2c.

Shepherd Returned.

Corporal Adrian Shepherd, 23 Div. arrived in N. Y., Apr. 28. He was discharged at Camp Taylor May 14. He saw service at Chateau Thierry, Argonne, Phemes, Phismet, Verdun, St. Mihiel and other places. He served in a machine gun battalion almost two years and was awarded a first-class machine-gunnery badge. Corporal Shepherd was never ill a day but was slightly gassed twice, and is glad to be back in his old Kentucky home. He landed in Liverpool, England, from there to LeHarve, France, then to a machine gun school for three weeks in sight of Germany and Italy.

NOTES ON ADAIR COUNTY.

BY JOHN AVROE STEELE.

No. 19.

COL. WILLIAM CASEY, MRS JANE OR JENNIE CASEY, AND JUDGE

ROBERT TODD.

To Be Continued.

West Point, Miss.

Casey appeared in Lincoln county in the early part of the year, 1779. He lived at Logan's Fort during the summer, and in the early autumn, returned to Virginia, but came again to Logan's Fort about the beginning of the winter. He spent the winter of 1779-1780, which is memorable for its extreme severity, in an open camp, upon the banks of the Hanging Fork of Dick's river. He remained in Lincoln county for ten years, during which time, he actively engaged in the defense of the country, and participated as a soldier in the various military movements made against the hostile Indians. A portion of the time, he resided in Logan's Fort, near the present site of Stanford, but afterwards, he established a "station" upon the waters of the Hanging Fork of Dick's river. This "station" was three miles and seven miles from the present sites of Stanford and Danville, respectively. The term, "station," as used by the pioneers, was a place where several men and families associated themselves together and lived near to each other for mutual protection from the Indians, and helped each other upon occasions of necessity. Usually a stockade, or block house, or both, were erected, or the dwelling houses were situated near to each other so that, if one house was assailed, the occupants of the others, could assist in its defense, at once, by the use of their rifles, in shooting from their own homes, which were provided with loop holes through the walls for that purpose.

In the autumn of 1789, when Casey was thirty-three years of age, he removed to Adair county, and must have, by that time, improved very much in personal appearance, since the visit to the home of his future father-in-law, in the Holston river country. At the time of his removal to Adair county, he has been described as a large man, of very prepossessing appearance, and when he became more advanced in years, was corpulent. His eyes were black, sharp and piercing, but kindly in their expression, and his hair was as dark as the raven. He had a very fine forehead and the lines of his face were clear cut. He was very much esteemed by his acquaintances and was famous for his kindness of heart. He was noted for his great coolness, tact, and courage upon occasions of extreme personal danger. One trait of his character, was very remarkable for the time and generation in which he lived, when his personal prowess and courage are considered. That was a time when men were very proud of their personal prowess, their physical strength and ability to fight. They engaged in "fisti-cuff" fighting upon the least provocation, and frequently, when there was no provocation at all. Many fought for the mere prize of victory, and to exhibit their skill and ability to give and bear punishment. It was held to be cowardly to make use of weapons, in fighting with any one, except the Indians, and it was cowardly to refuse a challenge to personal combat with the hands, feet and teeth. It was considered that there could be no excuse for a large and strong man to decline a challenge to personal combat with any one, who claimed that he had suffered a grievance, or who wanted to engage in a fight, except a lack of courage to accept the challenge and to engage in a fight. In the estimation of that generation, in Kentucky, which had so many necessary occasions to rely upon personal courage, the want of it rendered the individual perfectly helpless in a popular way. Men and women looked upon an individual, whom they suspected of lacking physical courage, as a thing perfectly contemptible and not worthy of trust any way. Casey had the moral courage to ignore this well nigh universal sentiment. Although a large and powerful man, and more than a match in physical prowess for the majority of the men in the country, he was never known to engage in a contest of physical strength or to participate in any fighting with his fellowmen, which was then termed "fair fighting," which term included simply all characters of fighting with natural weapons. It was well understood, that if a quarrel was pushed upon Casey, and he was compelled to fight, that he would do so, with weapons. It was, however, a trait of his character, which was well-known, that he never sought a personal trouble with any one, either great or small. No one who knew his history, however, ever doubted his personal courage.

In the year, 1781, and while Casey was residing at Logan's Fort, Montgomery's Station was attacked by Indians. Montgomery's Station was twelve miles to the southwest of Logan's Fort, and upon the head waters of Green river, and two and one-half miles from Pettitt's Station. It had been established by William Montgomery and his sons and a son-in-law, by the name of Joseph Russell, who had removed to it, from the Holston river country, in 1780. It consisted of four cabins, one of which was built upon each of the four corners of a square, and in easy gun shot of each other. One was occupied by William Montgomery, Sr., his wife and three sons, Thomas, Robert and James, and two daughters, Jane and Betsey. Another, was occupied by William Montgomery, Jr., and his family; a third, by John Montgomery, and his wife; and the fourth, by Joseph Russell and his family. At the time of the attack, Thomas and Robert Montgomery were absent, and were engaged as spies upon the movements of the Indians, while Mrs. Montgomery, the wife of William Montgomery, Sr., and her little daughter, Flora, were absent at Logan's Fort, which left in the cabin of William Montgomery, Sr., only himself and daughters, Jane and Betsey, who were young women, and his son, James, who was a small boy. In the month of March, of 1781, a party of Indians surrounded the station, at night, and waited for the dawn of day to make the attack. Just at the break of day, Wm. Montgomery, Sr., opened the door of his cabin and went out of it, while a negro boy was bringing in a log of wood, upon his shoulder, for the fire. The Indians, who were nearby in hiding, opened fire with their rifles. The negro boy was hit by a bullet and sank down, dead, upon the doorstep, with the log of wood across his body. William Montgomery attempted to escape to the rear of his cabin, but seven rifle bullets penetrated his body, and he fell dead. The Indians, immediately, made a rush for the open door, with the purpose of entering and overcoming the occupants before the door could be closed. Jane, the older daughter, pushed the body of the negro boy from the door and thrust to the shutter of the door, but before she could place the bar, with which it was secured, across it, the Indians reached the door and undertook to push it open. Though Jane was a strong young woman, her strength was insufficient to hold the door shutter, and one of the Indians thrust his arm between the shutter and the post of the door, when Jane called, aloud, to some imaginary person to reach to her, Thomas' gun. The ruse had the desired effect, and the Indian withdrew his arm and Jane, immediately, closed the door and placed the bar across it. During this struggle at the door, Betsey, the younger girl, who was about twelve years of age, clambered up the chimney, which was only nine or ten feet in height, jumped to the ground from its top, and fled in the direction of Pettitt's Station. One Indian pursued her, but she fairly outran him and succeeded, in reaching Pettitt's Station safely. The Indians, being attracted to the chimney by the escape of Betsey, from it, approached it and one clambered upon it, with the purpose of entering the cabin by means of it, but Jane apprehending such an attempt, threw a large feather bed upon the blazing fire in the chimney. The smoke, from the burning bed, was so thick and stifling, that the Indians were deterred from descending the chimney, and no further attempt was made to break into or enter the cabin. John Montgomery was taken entirely by surprise, and the Indians succeeded in entering his cabin and killing him, and taking his wife a prisoner. Joseph Russell, who had no means of defense, his gun having been broken a few days before, escaped from his cabin, but his wife and three children were made prisoners. At the first noise of the attack, William Montgomery, Jr., sprang out of bed, barred his door, and from a crevice over the door opened fire upon the attackers. He killed one of the Indians and mortally wounded another, and they feared to come to close quarters with him. Before the Indian, who went in pursuit of Betsey, had returned, the others, probably apprehensive of a pursuit and attack, hurriedly, left the scene, taking with them, the prisoners, including several negro slaves. They, also, took, along with them, their wounded comrade. The Indian, who pursued Betsey, returned after the others were gone, and, not knowing what had transpired, got upon the trunk of a fallen tree and gave out a loud halloo for the purpose of attracting an answering yell from his comrades. Unfortunately for him, he was within rifle shot of William Montgomery, Jr., who had not yet opened the door to his cabin, fearing the Indians had only pretended to leave for the purpose of drawing him out of his cabin so that they might kill him. He now shot and killed the Indian who was hallooing from the log of the fallen tree.

DICE of DESTINY

By
Jackson Gregory

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Senor don Antonio de la Guerra, wealthy Spanish ranch owner on the American side of the Mexican border, is informed by his American attorney that a technical error has been found in his will. The senor signs a new document without reading it.

CHAPTER II—Teresa, only grandchild of the senor, finds evidence of a struggle in the library and her grandfather missing. The belief is that the senor has been carried across the border by Mexican rebels. Billy Stanway, Teresa's sweetheart, takes command of the situation and orders the servants and vaqueros to arm themselves.

CHAPTER III—Stanway, with twenty men, starts in pursuit of the rebels. They meet Eduardo Ramon Torre, kinsman of Teresa, who has been wounded, he claims, by the escaping rebels.

Torre laughed. "We? So you are one of us, senor? Bueno. It is a pleasure to know."

"He has met up with the raiders, Senor Stanway," Gaucho snarled. "He was riding this way from across the river. He is wounded, see?"

Stanway saw that there was blood upon the young Spaniard's cheek, that there was a long cut which might have been made by a grazing bullet.

"Small reason we should loiter here," he said quickly. "What way did they go, Torre?"

"South, naturally, senor," replied Torre evenly.

"Gaucho!" cried Stanway then. "Scatter your men out as we ride so that we make a line a mile long when we come to the hills just across the line. Let them keep a sharp lookout, and fire if they see the rebels. We must not get too far apart, or we shall not be able to do anything. How many of them were there, Torre?"

"I forgot to count, senor. I should say, fifty, perhaps."

"We are twenty. That is enough. You are not coming with us?"

"I think not. Why, with so competent a leader as you, should I come also? No, I think," and he turned his horse toward the white walls of the hacienda, "that I shall remain here with my kinswoman. There may be a second attack upon the rancho. Good hunting, senor."

He turned his horse, and, sitting easily, gracefully in the deep Mexican saddle, rode away through the moonlight. Stanway, frowning after the retreating form, hesitated a moment.

Then, calling sharply to Gaucho Morales, he gave his horse the spur and turned southward.

"You understand what we're doing, Gaucho?" he said sternly. "We're invading Mexico, come right down to it. We're not supposed to have any business there just now. We've got to take care of ourselves."

"Si, senor," muttered Gaucho at his side.

CHAPTER IV.

Word From the Insurrectos.

Moon paled, stars died, the east flushed to the coming of the sun before they turned back from a fruitless quest, riding again close together toward the north.

Stanway and Gaucho had kept upon the trail through the fields, the others spreading out to east and west as they rode that there might be no chance of missing the party they sought in the night.

But in an hour they had come into a country where all tracks were mingled with the hoof marks of cattle and vaqueros' ponies, and their trail was smothered and lost.

Shortly before midnight they had come upon three men, ragged, ugly-looking Mexicans, sleeping about a camp fire which was fast dying. The men knew nothing or professed at ignorance, Stanway could not tell which.

After that nothing, although they had pushed many miles into the Mexican country until they realized the utter uselessness of riding farther.

"We may as well go back, Gaucho," Stanway said at last. "They will want ransom, I suppose. When they speak we'll know what to do."

And reluctantly, his face black with the wrath upon him, Gaucho Morales called to his men to turn back.

The sunlight lay bright and warm upon the oranges and their blossoms when they rode back to the rancho. Stanway threw himself from the saddle, a bit stiff from long hours of hard riding.

Then, walking slowly now, loath to greet Teresa de la Guerra with news of their failure, he came into the patio. She was there waiting for him.

"Nothing," he blurted out. "We have found nothing."

"I know," she said quietly. She came toward him, putting out her hands. "You have been good to us, Senor Billy."

He laughed a bit awkwardly. "I don't know how," he retorted. "I have done nothing. You have not been molested here?"

She hesitated. He saw a quick frown gather her brows. Then, speaking lightly, she replied, saying:

"No. But come; you must be hungry and tired out. Coffee is ready."

He went with her to the broad-open doors.

"Torre is here?" he asked, his eyes intent upon her face.

The frown came again, and was gone quickly. But he had seen it. "He is here, yes. Asleep, I think. He was wounded. You know?"

"He is not badly hurt?"

Her tired eyes, into which sleep had not come during the long night, grew brightly contemptuous.

"It is only his beauty which is harmed," she said swiftly.

"Good morning, prima mia!" called a deep, laughing voice. "Ah, still with us, Senor Stanway?"

Torre, debonaire in the dark, youthful beauty of him, greeted them at the doorway.

"Certainly Senor Stanway is still with us," said Teresa coolly. "He is my guest, my grandfather's friend, Senor Torre!"

Torre laughed and lifted his shoulders.

"Enter," he said with a graciousness which was in some strange way vaguely insulting; it was as though he were the master here, and because of his generosity not only Stanway but the girl as well were allowed upon the premises.

Now it was Teresa who flushed. "Come, Senor Billy," she said quietly. "We are going to have coffee together."

For the fraction of a second the two men stood fronting each other, their level eyes filled with challenge, with a mistrust which was little less than hatred.

Then the Spaniard, bowing again, turned away, with a slight smile playing under the small, pointed mustache, and Stanway followed his hostess.

Pedro himself superintended the serving of the simple breakfast.

"Senorita," Stanway said at last, pushing back his chair. "I should like to go back to the drawing room. There might be something there to give us a hint that will help us."

"Si," she said, "I had thought of that. I looked last night carefully after you had gone."

"You found nothing?"

"Nothing that I could understand," she answered quietly. "Something I could not."

He looked up at her quickly, his eyes full of question.

"This," she answered, not waiting for him to speak.

She placed a folded paper before him. He glanced at it, frowned, looked again, and turned once more to her.

"It is his will. Dated last night. But why has he made a new one?"

"Read it," as quietly as before, though her eyes were brightening with some surge of emotion he could not guess.

He ran through it hastily, skimming the lines, eager for the gist of it. And when he had found it he leaped to his feet, his hands clenched, amazement and anger mingled in his eyes.

"It is a forgery!" he cried sharply. "No," shaking her head. "It is his signature. And, look, to make certain I investigated. Pedro and Juana and Vidal witnessed the signature. That is what brought Mr. Dempton last night."

"But," he muttered heavily, "the thing is impossible! Why, he has given everything, everything to Torre! And he hated Torre more than he pretended to hate an American!"

"Yet it is his will," she reminded him. "And he is gone. And Senor Torre is here."

"Already with the air of a master!" shouted Stanway. He was already half across the room, sheer wrath in his eyes now, the will crumpled in his hand.

"Wait!" the girl cried, running to him, her hand upon his arm as though she would hold him back. "What are you going to do?"

"To tell him that he is no less a fool than a thief," he retorted. "That he must explain his opportune presence here as well as the disappearance of De la Guerra."

"Again I appear to eavesdrop. Again I prove the adage that he who listens hears disappointing things of himself." It was Torre leaning indolently in the doorway.

"You are going to say, senor—"

Stanway flung the crumpled paper in front of him.

"Explain that!" he snapped. "You can't get away with a thing like this, Torre. Explain it!"

"When I have read it," replied Torre coolly, his small hand carelessly taking up the document. "Ah"—with what sounded like very genuine surprise in his tone—"It is De la Guerra's will!"

Teresa and Stanway watched him closely.

"It seems very clear," he said then, his eyes smiling. He folded the paper carefully and thrust it into his pocket. "Where is the need for explanation?"

"The will was made last night," said Stanway crisply. "The ink of the signatures was hardly dry when he disappeared. What is the connection of the two events, senor?"

"You ask riddles, senor," Torre shrugged his shoulders.

A servant in snowy white linen livery appeared in the dining room doorway.

"El Capitan Juarez to speak with the senorita," he announced.

Stanway started, swinging about, forgetting Torre for the instant.

"Of the rebel army?" he demanded. "Si, senor! Of the insurrectos."

"I can guess his errand," remarked Torre indifferently. "He will no doubt wish to speak with me. Tell him, muchacho, that as the De la Guerra heir I shall speak with him—when I have finished my coffee. A little more sugar, Pedro."

CHAPTER V.

The Game Begins.

Teresa de la Guerra's face went red and white, and Torre, seeing, smiled. She heard in the words only an insult to her beloved papa grande, knowing as she so well knew that of all men the old Spaniard hated his arrogant young kinsman most implacably.

"We don't understand," she said presently, turning her back upon the man at table and addressing Stanway.

"Perhaps Captain Juarez' call will clear matters for us. Will you come with me, Senor Stanway?"

Torre's face darkened as he watched them go out together.

In the drawing room, in much worn uniform bespeaking his rank, a very broad, heavy-set Mexican, swarthy, hard-featured, keen-eyed, was waiting. He bowed deeply as they entered.

"Senorita," he said briskly, his eyes disregarding Stanway and resting upon the girl's face in a keen regard, "it is an unpleasant duty which brings me here this morning."

"Be seated," she said quietly, going to a chair. "But first, Captain Juarez, this is my friend, Senor Stanway of the Painted Rock rancho."

The two men bowed coolly. Stanway remained standing near the girl's chair, while Juarez sat down.

"We of poor Mexico," said the captain shortly, "are fighting hard for a dear cause. We sacrifice ourselves, our hopes, our homes for the thing we love most, senorita."

"And that is our country. We do things which we do not like to do simply because it is our duty to take any opportunity which chance gives us to free the neck of our land from the foot of the tyrant."

Teresa bowed.

"And you have called this morning; you have crossed the border—"

"At the behest of a Mexican's duty. Senorita, your grandfather is well and sends his love to you."

"Tell me," she cried impetuously, "where is he?"

"Many miles beyond the border," he answered succinctly. "In the hands of friends—if he accedes to our demands," significantly.

"And those demands?" curiously.

"I have not as yet made of him," returned the captain. "Allow me to explain, senorita. I know Senor de la Guerra, if not personally at least very well by repute. I know that he does not love my Mexico, and that he is very stubborn."

"Our cause needs money and he has it in great, unnecessary quantities."

"Had I made a demand upon him for a note to you, stating that he was held for ransom and urging you to pay it, I know that he would have refused. So I come straight to you, without so much as a word to him, informing you that unless the money is sent immediately—"

He broke off, shrugging his shoulders.

"You realize, senor," broke in Stanway coolly, "that this is rather an unusual sort of thing at this day? That it is not without danger to you? If the senorita were not disposed to give what you ask, if on the other hand we held you for the crime you have committed—"

Again the captain shrugged.

"It would mean imprisonment for me, or perhaps death," he answered promptly. "Things which a soldier faces every day of his life and grows to think nothing about. And—pardon me, senorita—it would mean the death of the Senor de la Guerra."

Again a little shiver trembled through the frame of the girl. Stanway, his eyes steady upon the Mexican's, was silent a moment. Finally he said, turning to Teresa:

"Before you give this gentleman his answer, senorita, may I ask for a few words with you?"

"May I interrupt again?" It was Eduardo Ramon Torre, insolent and debonaire, bowing in the doorway, a fresh, unlighted cigarette between his fingers. "Buenos dias, Senor el Capitan."

"What is it?" she asked coldly.

"Merely this: As heir to the De la Guerra estate I may be a prejudiced person. You, with no personal interest, and a quick light flicked in his eyes at the girl's winking at his words, "are the one to decide. Shall the captain's request be granted? I leave it to you, senorita. Entirely to you."

Teresa bit her lip, the color surging angrily into her cheeks. She saw the trap as plainly as did Torre, as plainly as Stanway saw it. And she did not see the answer to make.

"It is perhaps not impossible," went on Torre evenly, "that a large part of the sum mentioned is now on the premises. We all know that my kinsman has always been his own banker; that he at all times has been able to produce a large amount of gold at a moment's notice."

"Unfortunately, in answering his summons to the rancho, I came too late for him to make me cognizant of the hiding place. Perhaps you, prima mia, are better informed?"

"Perhaps," she answered him quietly, though the color still ran red in her cheeks.

Captain Juarez stared at him fixedly, his hard eyes as insolent as those of Torre, and made no answer.

"I think, senor," went on Torre in mock courtesy, still lingering in the doorway, "that it is with me that you wish to deal. Am I not right, prima mia?" lightly to Teresa.

The girl's eyes darkened. Juarez looked from one to another curiously.

"I think," he said slowly, "that I can have business with no one except la senorita. She is the one to speak in a case like this one, since the old senor is not here to speak for himself and she is his heiress."

"Let your keen eyes rest on this," Torre drew the will from his pocket and carelessly tossed it into Juarez' lap.

The Mexican looked at it swiftly, his eye ran down the written sheet, and he started palpably when his glance rested upon the name Eduardo Ramon Torre.

"I have been misinformed," he cried, starting to his feet. "The senorita is not the heiress. It is Senor Torre who inherits!"

"Seguro," replied Torre, putting out his shapely hand for the will. "And I, senor, am that Senor Torre. Now, what do you want?"

"This is true, senorita?" Juarez whirled about, his eyes bright and hard upon Teresa's.

"You come from papa grande," she answered him guardedly. "Did he not tell you of a change in his will?"

"We did not speak," Juarez reminded her. "As I have said, I knew that it would be useless to talk with him. He knows only that he is being held; he does not know why. I know only, and he resorted to the shrug so much a part of his method of speech, "that rumor has it that you are his heiress, and this paper states that Torre inherits."

"Rumor at times is misinformed," Torre said smilingly. "You have the will and testament itself before you. If it is sufficiently plain that I and not the senorita," with an apologetic bow to Teresa, "represent my kinsman; I trust that you will state your errand concisely."

"It is this," said Juarez shortly. "El Senor de la Guerra is held by my men for ransom. Twenty thousand dollars will bring him back to you promptly, without a scratch on him. A refusal to pay will be a signal for his death."

"So," remarked Torre coolly. "It is only twenty thousand dollars. You are modest, senor!"

"American money," Juarez added as coolly.

"American money," nodded Torre. "That is better than Mexican pesos, at any rate. It is at least less insulting to my kinsman."

Captain Juarez made no reply. Teresa and Stanway looked at each other swiftly.

Torre, smiling as though the whole matter were merely amusing, addressed himself to the girl.

"Teresa," and she flushed under the easy familiarity, "perhaps the valiant captain has not yet breakfasted. He has a long ride before him and it would be better if he should not carry away a misunderstanding of the De la Guerra hospitality. Also, while he has his coffee, you and I might discuss the situation?"

"Yes," the girl agreed slowly. "That would perhaps be best." Her hand went to the bell cord to summon Pedro.

"We have just breakfasted, senor captain. If you will go with Pedro he will see that you are served. And Senor Torre, Senor Stanway and myself can avail ourselves of the time to come to a decision."

The captain bowed, and with no hesitation turned his back on them to follow the servant to the dining room. Torre came in, sat down, crossing his legs with elaborate care to the crease in his trousers, and favored Stanway with a look which mocked openly.

"An interesting situation, is it not, senor?" he asked lightly.

"An extremely hazardous game you are playing, Torre," cried Stanway angrily.

"I?" Torre lifted his brows. "It is not I who play. It is I who watch the game."

"Watch the pawns your own fine hand has set moving?" was Stanway's heated retort. "Do you think that you can get away with a thing of this kind, Torre? Why, man, it smells to heaven!"

"Recriminations aside—at least shall we postpone them? There is a crisis demanding attention. Now," lifting his hand against Stanway's words, "I have a proposition to make—to you, Teresa."

"What is it?" she asked coldly.

"Merely this: As heir to the De la Guerra estate I may be a prejudiced person. You, with no personal interest, and a quick light flicked in his eyes at the girl's winking at his words, "are the one to decide. Shall the captain's request be granted? I leave it to you, senorita. Entirely to you."

Teresa bit her lip, the color surging angrily into her cheeks. She saw the trap as plainly as did Torre, as plainly as Stanway saw it. And she did not see the answer to make.

"It is perhaps not impossible," went on Torre evenly, "that a large part of the sum mentioned is now on the premises. We all know that my kinsman has always been his own banker; that he at all times has been able to produce a large amount of gold at a moment's notice."

"Unfortunately, in answering his summons to the rancho, I came too late for him to make me cognizant of the hiding place. Perhaps you, prima mia, are better informed?"

"Perhaps," she answered him quietly, though the color still ran red in her cheeks.

Green-Seal your house and save repair bills

House-owners know the annoyance and expense of continually paying out money for repair bills, but by using Hanna's Green Seal Paint on their property occasionally, these bills can be done away with to a large extent. Any surface, if left to itself and not properly painted, is bound to decay sooner or later, whereas a coat or two of paint at reasonable intervals will prepare it to withstand all the ravages of time and wet weather.

FOR STATE SENATOR.

19th Senatorial District
J. R. GARNETT, of Adair County.

Col. H. H. Denhardt has withdrawn from the race for Governor and the Black forces are jubilant.

Dr. P. W. Bushong, of Metcalfe county, has filed with the Secretary of State as a Republican candidate for the State Senate in the 19th district.

Former Secretary of State Elihu Root, the brains of the Republican party, says that President Wilson acted within legal rights in withholding the peace league treaty from the United States Senate. Lodge and Borah will throw up the sponge in due time. The President is on his way home.

It has been published in the Louisville papers that Gen. Jas. Garnett's resignation as one of the attorneys in the Bingham inheritance tax suit, is in the hands of Gov. Black, and that the Governor will inform the other two attorneys that their resignations would be accepted.

There is but little interest being manifested here in the Democratic candidates for subordinate places on the State ticket. In fact, but few if any of the voters know the names of the candidates. We would like to see a list and the location of the gentlemen who are seeking position on the ticket.

The race for the State Senate in this district will not warm to fever heat until after the primary. The district is a few hundred Democratic, but Mr. J. R. Garnett, who will bear the Democratic banner, will carry more than the strength of his party. The Democrats of the district must not lose sight of the fact that Mr. Garnett is anxious for every Democrat to make up his mind to vote at November election.

WORLD PEACE.

The National Democratic Committee met at Chicago during the last days of May. While it was in session Chairman Cummings spoke in part as follows: "The argument that the covenant is vague can be advanced against all the great documents of history. The same assertion could be made with reference to the Magna Charta, the Petition of rights, the Bill of rights, the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States.

"There are some who solemnly assert that the league would not only embroil us in the affairs of Europe, but would force America into future wars. It is extraordinary that men should waste our time and vex our patience by suggesting the fear that we may be forced into future wars, while forgetting entirely that America was forced into this war and that this war has not yet been concluded.

"No league of peace was in existence when this war began; no league of peace was in existence when we entered this greatest of all wars and it was only when we formed in haste a League of Nations under unified command that we were able to win this war.

"The United States and the Allies have, in fact, been operating since America entered the war, under a sort of league of friendship, born of war and held together by the necessity of realizing common hopes and mutual ideals. This association of nations, held together by a common purpose, fought the war to a victorious conclusion; and it is this same league of friendship which dictated the terms of the armistice and is about to dictate the terms of the world peace. If such a result can be achieved by an informal and temporary association of this character, why should it not be continued in a more definite and binding form; and what plausible reason can be suggested for losing the tremendous asset which the world has thereby gained?"

"All who love America should take a solemn pride in supporting the President and in urging the ratification of the treaty so that our country may fulfill her high destiny and bring enduring peace to a liberated world."

Ozark.

After the "Flu"

You know how you felt—you who have had the "flu." That easily tired feeling. You are "all in" after the least exertion. Just seems as if you cannot get your strength back. Weeks and months sometimes have gone by till you wonder if you are ever going to get well again.

That is because you have not been drinking Devonia, the American Medicinal Mineral Water. Really wonderful are the reports that have come to us entirely unsolicited of the way Devonia has helped people after the "flu."

Its action is alterative and reconstructive. It enables the body to rid itself of the poisons left by the "flu." It tones up your system and very quickly you find yourself looking better and feeling better. Your old-time vigor returns. You feel like yourself once more.

The reason that Devonia is so helpful, not only after the "flu," but in so many other human ailments, is that it contains those elements which, as far back as human knowledge goes into the past, have been recognized as helpful to the human system. By drinking Devonia regularly—a tablespoonful in a glassful of water—decayed food elements which have acted as poisons in the body are loosened and carried off. It is their presence in the bowels which have in many cases retarded and even prevented complete recovery.

Devonia is known and indorsed by the medical profession, and is prescribed by leading physicians everywhere. Its effectiveness in cases of Constipation, Rheumatic Affections, Hardening of the Arteries, High Blood Pressure, Eczema and similar skin diseases has been demonstrated time and again.

Devonia comes to you just as Mother Nature skillfully compounded it in her own laboratory, a thousand feet underground. It is not changed, altered or condensed in any way. It is nature-made. That is why it is so good for you. So heavily laden is it with natural remedies that, as we have said, a tablespoonful in a glass of water is enough to take at a time in most instances. Thus a dose costs you only about a cent and a half, making it the cheapest remedy you can buy.

Devonia is to be had at most drug stores in the city. If you are desirous of knowing more about this wonderful medicinal water, write for our booklet, "The Story of a Well Man." Perhaps the facts it relates may have an important message for you. Use the coupon.

Take a Tablespoonful of Devonia to a Glassful of water.

She Followed the Line We Sent Over the Rhine

The familiar figure in blue uniform and poke bonnet is back home to serve, after four years in khaki with the boys "Over There." Salvation Army lassies served old fashioned American dough nuts in the front line trenches, and now that the war is over they will be found again in the slums and dark places of our great cities, ready to give a helping hand to men, women and children who are on the down grade. The Salvation Army Home Service Campaign, in Kentucky, outside of Louisville and Jefferson county, opens June 23, to last one week.

MISS BOOTH, IN RAGS, AIDED LONDON POOR

Salvation Army Commander,
Disguised, Roamed Through Slums to Study Intimate Problems of East End Unfortunates

Miss Evangeline Booth, daughter of the late General William Booth, founder of the Salvation Army, has given her life to the service of the poor and the unfortunate. Few persons, if any, know she went about in the East End of London disguised in rags that she might help the unfortunate. When her father stood erect amid a storm of abuse and even physical violence she stood beside him.

She knows how the poor suffer because she has suffered with them. She knows there still remains in the wreck of a dissolute man a spark of manhood that will kindle a redeeming flame, because she has fanned many flickering sparks until her patient has regained his feet. She now heads the Salvation Army in the United States at the great moment of its career. The old time slurs and doubts have been banished. During the week of June 23-30 the Salvation Army will appeal to the people of Kentucky for funds to carry out its after-the-war program. Contribute to the Salvation Army Home Service Fund Campaign. Remember, to the Salvation Army "A Man May Be Down, but He's Never Out."

WILSON ENDORSES SALVATION ARMY.

President Wilson, burdened as he is, found time to cable his endorsement of the Salvation Army Home Service Fund Campaign, for Kentucky outside of Louisville and Jefferson county, which will be conducted during the week of June 23-30. The telegram:

Commander Miss E. Booth, Personal, Salvation Army, 120 West Fourteenth street, New York:

I am very much interested to know that the Salvation Army is about to enter into a campaign for a sustaining fund. I feel that the Salvation Army needs no commendation from me. The love and gratitude it has elicited from the troops is a sufficient evidence of the work it has done, and I feel that I should not so much commend as to congratulate it. Cordially and sincerely yours,
WOODROW WILSON.

"OUT OF LOVE" CLUB UNIQUE ORGANIZATION

Members Are Girls Rescued by Salvation Army

The "Out of Love" Club is one of the important club organizations maintained by the Salvation Army in this country. In every large city where there is a Salvation Army corps girls who have been helped back into the normal pace of a workaday world are proud of the membership in this club. Disappointed, loveless girls who do not forget kindnesses shown them in their hour of greatest need give out of love to help other girls receive the same friendliness. In a simple, quiet way, this unique idea has been maintained for over 20 years.

In every large city in the country there are girls who have needed the ministrations of the Salvation Army. After they have been helped and sent on their way again they become life members of this club if they so desire. Only girls are admitted who have given a good account of themselves for at least one month in the positions found for them by the Salvation Army after their release from a hospital or home. These girls pledge themselves to keep alive the spirit of friendliness and home which the Salvation Army has spread among them. The girls are expected to dress in a plain, simple way, and avoid in any sense of the word gaudy or tawdry clothing.

Gossiping or tale bearing is tabooed. If members of the club transgress this rule they are liable to suspension for a month or longer. The "Out of Love Club" is one of the many activities that will benefit by the success of the Salvation Army Home Service Fund Campaign for Kentucky June 23-30.

To Play Great Organ at the Methodist Centenary

MRS. MONTGOMERY LYNCH of Seattle will play the great $50,000 organ in the presentation of "The Wayfarer," the magnificent pageant of the Methodist Centenary Celebration, in Columbus, O., June 20 to July 13. Montgomery Lynch, her husband, will direct the chorus of 1,000 voices, which is a part of the pageant.

REDUCED FARE ADDS INTEREST

Visitors to Methodist Centenary to Be Well Cared For.

REGISTRATIONS ON INCREASE

Housing Committee of the Celebration Have More Than Forty Thousand Rooms in Private Homes at Their Disposal, Where Those Who Attend Can Be Lodged as Conveniently as at a Hotel.

Announcement by the government that a special low rate of one and a third fares for the round trip has been authorized for the celebration, Columbus, O., June 20 to July 13, has tremendously increased the interest in that event and advanced manifold the inquiries and registrations coming from all parts of the United States. At headquarters the other day a single mail brought cash registrations from 14 separate states and South America.

The low rate has increased work for the special committees, which are responsible for housing the large influx of visitors now seen to be certain. Accommodations fall into three classes:

First, the hotels, which have an average daily capacity of 5,000 visitors.

The second field of accommodation will be in public buildings, which have been specially fitted up for this sort of service for the celebration. These include the State School for the Blind, the State School for the Deaf, the large barracks which were provided at Ohio State university for the student army training corps, and other buildings of a similar nature held in reserve should the throng exceed even present generous expectations.

The third line of convenience for the hospitality of Columbus is in the homes of the citizens themselves. More than 40,000 rooms have been made available for the celebration, and these are carefully indexed by location, telephone number and best means of access. Visitors to the celebration can be lodged as conveniently as a clerk at a hotel assigns a visitor to his room. In order that there might be no misunderstanding, the committee in charge has a uniform rate for accommodations in private dwellings. The charge will be

Certain-teed

Roofing

Certain-teed renders a war service.

Certain-teed saves war supplies, because it is made of materials which have no use in war products. It serves war needs because it provides our armies, and peoples everywhere, with efficient, economical roofing.

Certain-teed saves war transportation, because it is so compact that it takes minimum car space, and so easy to handle that it requires the minimum time to load and unload.

Certain-teed saves war labor. It can be laid in less time than any other type of roof; and no skill is required—anyone who will follow the simple directions that come packed in the center of roll can lay it correctly.

The durability and economy of Certain-teed are recognized the world over, as proved by its enormous sale. It is now the standard roof for factories, office buildings, hotels, stores, warehouses, garages, farm buildings, etc.

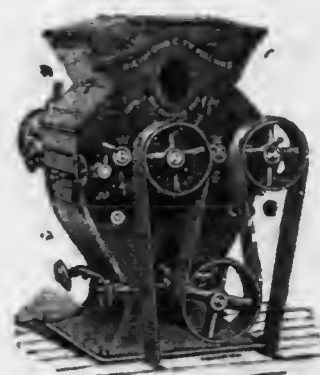

Guaranteed 5, 10 or 15 years, according to thickness. Sold by best dealers everywhere.

New Proprietary Tax

Under the new revenue law now effective dealers must collect a tax of one cent for each 25 cents or fraction thereof of the price of all toilet articles (except toilet soaps and toilet soap powders) and a tax at the rate on proprietary medicines. These taxes are to be collected by the use of stamps etc. The stamp must be affixed to each article by the vendor, the cost of which SHALL BE reimbursed to the vendor by the purchaser. In other words, it is the intention of the law that this tax must be borne by the consumer and that the stamp must be affixed by the retailer at the time the sale is made and the price charged for the preparation must not include the stamp, but the consumer must pay for the stamp as required by the law. The law specifically provides that the price of the article be raised because of this tax in any amount exceeding the amount of the stamp which is required. In other words, the tax one cent on a 25 cent article brings the price up to .26 cents, and you are not permitted to collect more than that amount, as we understand the law. The Government does not permit under this law profiteering with the tax as a basis or excuse and any attempt to extort a profit from customers under a guise of collecting a tax, will be severely punished, and in Section 1319 of the law, provision is made for a fine of $1000.00 or imprisonment for a year, or both, in cases of persons who represent increase in selling price as due to tax imposed, when the increase is greater than the amount which must actually be paid as tax.

The School Book Decision

When attorneys in the State Text Book case represented to Judge Robert L. Stout that twenty-six firms would be financially effected by reopening the school book question, the Judge replied that he was very sorry, but that the school children must also be considered. It is said that the contracts so carelessly tossed over to certain firms will amount to $6,000,000 in five years. This did not awe Judge Stout, because he realized that the six millions would come out of the pockets of the people of Kentucky, and that their right to be considered was above every other right. The Judge looked past the business men with fingers already closing over the big money and saw the thousands and thousands of little school children of Kentucky—saw poor and ambitious boys struggling, with every conceivable drawback, to get an education—and he considered their interest first! God bless him!

Readers of the Sun, take my advice and give your fullest attention to every phase of this matter which may be brought out that you may ascertain with how much thought, and how much anxiety for the young boys and girls of Kentucky—the chief treasures of our Commonwealth—this work of book selecting has been done!

All who have charge of any phase of the education of the little children of Kentucky whether school teachers, superintendents, or any one else, have committed to them the most priceless trust which the State of Kentucky can give. But it is up to you, gentle reader and to me, to see how that is executed. And if we stand for even careless or hasty or perfunctory execution of such duties, it were better, as He said, that a mill-stone were hanged about our necks and that we were drowned in the depths of the sea!—Versailles Sun.

How Presiding Elder Hogard Got His Start.

Not many people who know our popular Presiding Elder Rev. W. F. Hogard know that he began his career as a country editor, in the hills of Clinton. He started a paper at Albany the county seat of Clinton. He bought him a country Campbell press, at that time a fine press. He had never seen one, but he set up that press, no little job for experienced machinist and had it running in less than a week. He did not know the boxes in type case and of course had never set a line of type, but he learned and not only wrote the matter for his paper but put it in print. While he was publishing his country weekly he printed a 200 page book and bound it handsomely. It was there in print shop he learned his patience and contracted the habit of doing things, which enabled him to put over the top the centenary drive in the Elizabethtown District. He said he never was a printer's devil but he felt like one many a time, while he was trying to make a living in a printing office.—E Town News.

Mrs. Guinn So Nervous Life was Almost Unendurable—Trutona Changed Her.

Louisville, Ky., June 17.—Mrs. Anna Guinn, a well-known Louisville woman of 2514 Woodlawn avenue, has recently recovered from an illness of long duration through use of Trutona.

"I suffered from nervous indigestion, constipation and loss of appetite for a long time," she said. "I was so nervous at times that it was difficult for me to tolerate the presence of my husband or others in the house, I couldn't sleep and would often just wander around the house at night, I never felt like being even able to do simplest of my household duties.

"But I feel like a woman made over again since taking two bottles of Trutona. This splendid medicine has accomplished the most wonderful results in my case, helping me in every way. My husband thinks Trutona has performed miracles for me. I think it is the most wonderful medicine in the world. I wouldn't be without a bottle of Trutona in the house. It does everything that is claimed for it, aiding weak, nervous and run down women."

Trutona is now being introduced and explained in Columbia at Paull Drug Co.

From Germany

Bendorf, Germany, May 4, 1919.

Dear mother:

Upon immediate thought I will endeavor to answer your most welcomed and appreciated letters dated April 5, and April 10, 1919, of which finds me well and get- ting along fine. Barney is taking the advantage of a 14 days fur- lough to some city in France. He will be back here about the 15th of this month. If Dalton is in the 32nd Division he is on his way home now. I received a letter from Bro. Stover which was dated Apr. 11, 1919. His ad- dress is as follows:

Rev. E. G. Stover,
Shauck, Ohio.

I also got a letter from Nannie. Well Papa, I noticed in the paper where Joe. Ed. Flowers went to Louisville to work for some firm. Has the noted garage of Flow- ers & Wethington ceased to fire?

How many garages are there in Columbia now? How is Mr. Stevenson and Buchanan-Lyon getting along?

Well I would love to see you all but I dont know when it will be.

The papers don't talk as favor- able now as it did a while back.

But nevertheless I think it wont be a great long while and I hope you all wont worry about me be- cause I am getting along fine in the A. E. F. I think I went through some hard stuff during the war which has taught me to know and realize a good thing when I have one, and as long as I keep this job which I have had every since I have been over here with the exception of the last two months of the war. I will get along the finest kind. Mother you know I always took every thing easy whether it was hard or soft and I havent changed the least bit in that respect, and dont never think that I am worrying and grieving to get home because I am not. But of course the first chance I get I will take it because I know my loved ones at home are worrying and very anxious to see me. I will be contented and perfectly satisfied until three months after peace is signed then I expect Uncle Sam to take me home, and put some "pep" in it too, ha, ha. Mother the sweet perfumes and decorations of the blooming trees are now represented in the territory by the spring stock. Hoping you the best wishes of the day and the very best of health, I remain lovingly

Your son,
Roy A. Rasner.

Eller.

Wheat harvest is now on in this part. The yield will be a- bove the average.

Welby R. Edmonds left last week for Champaign, Ill. He will take treatment at some U. S. Army hospital before returning home.

Rev. George Groves was in this part recently, preaching at all the churches in this section. F. M. Ballenger, of Albany, the well known traveling salesman, passed through this part Tues.

Prof. A. G. Coffey is teaching singing at Concord on Sat- urdays and Sundays.

L. M. Wilson and C. W. Bar- nard made a buisness trip to Columbia, Monday June 9th.

On June 8th Miss Julia Ber- nard and Mr. Ores Bernard were united in marriage, Rev. A. F. Chrisman officiating. The bride is the popular and accom- plished daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Bernard. The groom is a son of the late J. T. Bernard and recently returned from France where he did valiant service for "Uncle Sam." The writer joins their many friends in wishing them a happy and and prosperous journey through life.
